THE FINAL BUSINESS FRONTIER

13 APRIL 2023 | 3:00PM (UTC +8)

The frontiers of security, commerce, and exploration as well as science, technology and engineering no longer on Earth. These pillars of civilization now reside in space”

OVERVIEW

This programme will highlight: Space industry is booming. A new era of space exploration and space inspired industries is beginning to take shape with opportunities abound for all stakeholders. Initially started as government endeavour, it is now driven by the private sector.

According to a report by Space Foundation, the space industry grew at its fastest pace in years to reach a record USD469 billion in annual global spending in 2021. Commercial space ventures accounted for 77% of spending. More than USD224 billion came from products and services delivered by space firms and nearly USD138 billion was spent on infrastructure and support for commercial space enterprises. Despite the 2022 economic slowdown, space industry spending is expected to rise beyond USD634 billion by 2026.

Meanwhile, Morgan Stanley projected that the global space industry could generate revenue of more than USD 1 trillion by 2040, with significant opportunities arising from satellite broadband internet access, whilst space tourism will be a USD3 billion market by 2030 according to UBS.

An Initiative By

WIEF EDUCATION TRUST (WET)

WIEF Education Trust (WET) was launched during the 2nd WIEF in Islamabad in 2006, on the premise that education is the most important pillar in any society and that the fate as well as future of a community lies in the quality and availability of education for its people. WET aims to garner support and resources from the Muslim World to provide education opportunities to the people.

Since then, WET has carried out the unique WIEF Global Discourse Series that addresses topical issues relating to business and economics, as well as scientific and technological advancement crucial to the development in the Muslim World.

This programme has gained increasing popularity with the public and private sectors as well as academia. It attracts local and international award winners as well as high calibre speakers to the discourse.
